

Dealing With a Flea Infestation

Fleas are common external parasites that may infect your pet and cause itching and discomfort. Although they feed on the blood of dogs and cats, they sometimes bite humans. To effectively get rid of fleas and flea eggs, treatment should involve not only pets but also the household and exterior regions to eliminate eggs from bedding, grass, floor, furniture and other areas. Topical medications are needed to rid your pet of fleas.

Life Cycle of the Flea

Treatments

Treatment should begin as soon as signs of fleas appear and should be repeated regularly. Delay in treating the infestation may lead to flea-transmitted diseases.

Topical Solutions

Sprays

Baths

